Primeira parte

Read the text below and then answer the questions in English

The French woman who received the world's first face transplant said on Monday that the controversial operation had given her back "a normal life". Speaking publicly for the first time since undergoing surgery, Isabelle Dinoire thanked her doctors and told a packed press conference: "Now I have a face like everyone else".

Ms Dinoire, from Valenciennes, north of Amiens, lost her nose, lips and chin when her pet cross-labrador dog injured her face while she slept. She made medical history when she was given a partial face transplant using tissue from a brain-dead woman in a 15-hour operation at Amiens hospital in November. The team that carried out her face transplant has asked French authorities for permission to carry out similar operations.

Ms Dinoire thanked her medical team and the family of the donor. She explained how her face was terribly disfigured in what she described as an accident: "I had had a very disturbing week and lots of personal worries, so I took some tablets to forget. Then I felt faint and I lost consciousness. When I woke up I tried to light a cigarette and I couldn't understand why I couldn't hold it between my lips. It was then that I saw a pool of blood and the dog next to me. I went to look in the mirror and I was horrified. I couldn't believe what I saw, especially as I didn't feel any pain. Since that day my life has changed".
